

Part-time Reading Specialist

ILD, Institute for Learning and Development, a professional, clinical and educational organization in Lexington, MA, is currently looking for a part-time special education teacher with expertise in teaching reading as well as executive function strategies across grades and subject areas. ILD provides specialized one-to-one strategy instruction and executive function coaching, as well as specialized reading, writing, and math instruction for students with learning and attention differences.

Minimum qualifications include:

- * Master's degree in special education or reading
- * Training in Reading Programs (e.g., O-G, Wilson, LiPS, Project Read)
- * Experience teaching learning and executive function strategies to students with LD/ADHD/EF difficulties
- * Experience working with schools and parents
- * Availability to work with a minimum of 6 students during the week (6 hours)
- * Accessibility to our Lexington, MA office location
- * Please note: Caseload will build gradually over time

Benefits include mentoring, professional development, educational resources, attendance at ResearchILD's conferences, as well as access to our SMARTS Executive Function Curriculum and Trainings.

Job Type: Part-time

Pay: $50.00 -$60.00 per hour

Please submit a copy of your resume and a cover letter to Wendy Stacey, M.S., Director of Reading and Language at wstacey@ildlex.org.